Profile

When ALMUSTASHAR ALARABI was founded in 2005 , two very like-minded individuals, with a passion for customer satisfaction, joined forces to create a credible IT support provider. Although many IT support companies use the term "Customer Care" we have made it one of our core values, by employing dedicated IT professionals.

By focusing on our customer needs and how to offer them the most profitable solution, ALMUSTASHAR ALARABI has organically grown into a successful company, which constantly provides excellent quality services. We know that personal recommendation is the most efficient way to market our company.

Not only does ALMUSTASHAR ALARABI provide a fast and professional service but also a personal and friendly one. We fully understand that IT Support is a relationship, which grows between the client and our organization; and for this reason we employ team players and like-minded individuals.

Our heritage in networking and deep understanding of network-related technologies differentiate us from our competitors. Moving forward into the future, our focus has evolved to adapting the design, management and development of business technology to be a better servant to the greater business and to be used as a tool to drive innovation, enable market leadership and make companies tighter, better, more cost-effective and competitive.

Technology for Business

When most people think of computer networks, visions of queuing on the telephone or being passed from supplier to supplier naturally come to mind.

Whilst most companies do have some form of I.T provider; whenever a problem occurs, there is usually interruption to business and confusion as to which supplier is responsible for fixing the issue.

We have responded to the changes in technology, expanding our portfolio to enable us to provide end-to-end business solutions. Our 'one stop shop' philosophy makes it simple; whenever you have a problem you only need make one call.

Technology as a Services

Technology as a Service includes Software, Hardware and IT Services. By having your technology supplied as a service you can have one fixed monthly fee to cover all of your IT requirements. This allows you to easily budget your IT requirements and passes the responsibility for the performance and targets of your technology to a professional company with a proven track record.

Linksystems operates in the IT SERVICES sector. We provide services across the whole life of a project, offering our expertise at
